

Sasha McArthur

Crest Drive Elementary School

Let's Name it Thing

Once upon a time there lived two kittens. One was a girl, and one was a boy. They were very good friends. The boy was named George; the girl was named Chloe. Chloe and George were wild cats; they hunted rats and mice. They had a good life together. But one day Chloe went out to hunt. Then she heard hunters. She ran. Then she got trapped because they knew that she would run. George heard her call him. Sadly, he got trapped too.

"What are we going to do?" asked Chloe.

"I don't know," said George.

"But I know we will think of something." George said confidently.

The hunters came and took the cage away. The hunters took them to a big building.

"Are you sure?" she said.

"Positive," said George.

They were pushed into a cage. However, they were not alone. There was a toy mouse. It wasn't an ordinary toy mouse, though. George could see that very well because it was changing colors. It went from green, to pink, to blue, to red, and then back to green.

"Huh?" said Chloe. "What is that?" she said.

"I don't know," he said.

"Is it alive?" Chloe asked.

"No. I don't think so." George said.

Then it moved!

"Whoa!!!" screamed Chloe.

"Can we name it?" said George excitedly.

"Let's name it 'Thing'" Chloe said.

"Sure," he said.

"Hi, little Thing!" Chloe cooed.

Next thing they know, they are back in the forest.

"I am getting confused," said George.

"Me too. Can Thing talk?" she asked suddenly.

"I don't know." replied George.

"Yes!" said a voice. "I can." The voice was coming from the mouse. "I will soon go away from you."

"Why?" George and Chloe asked at the same time.

"I brought you back!" Thing said. And with a "poof" it was gone.

After that, they lived happily ever after.